

The Rev. Dr. Jan C. Heller

Ordained in 1982, the Rev. Dr. Jan C. Heller is a committed priest with a non-traditional career trajectory. He enjoys using skills that were developed over 20 years working as a bioethicist and healthcare executive to identify organizational and spiritual challenges facing parishioners and to address them in innovative ways. He has done focused work in church systems, small group facilitation, leadership development, and in adult education, as well as interim work in churches and the health care industry.

Dr. Heller holds an AB in Chemistry, cum laude, from The King's College, a Master of Divinity from Princeton Theological Seminary, and a PhD in Ethics and Society from Emory University. He is the author, co-author, or co-editor of four books, participated in writing two books published with the support of The Episcopal Church, and has authored more than 45 chapters and articles that appear in scholarly and popular journals. He has given over 300 academic and industry presentations in the US and in Canada, Europe, and Australia.

He lives in Poulsbo with his wife, Linda, and enjoys sailing their Outbound 46, Evensong, whenever he can get away.
